Little Sprouts Reads for a World Record

Students at Little Sprouts Child Enrichment Centers will join students nationwide in reading a classic

Methuen, MA (December 6, 2006) – Little Sprouts Child Enrichment Centers has registered to be part of a national World Record attempt at having the most people read the same literary passage at the same time. On Wednesday December 13, students at Little Sprouts will listen to a 1 page passage from Charlotte’s Web- along with approximately 300,000 other children across the country.

I remember loving Charlotte’s Web as a child,” says Meghan McGinley Crowe, Literacy Director at Little Sprouts. “I re-read it a few months ago and loved it just as much. Great literature will survive through many generations and this book is proof of that.” Ms. McGinley-Crowe is organizing the involvement of Little Sprouts in this venture.

“We have the reading passage, the children, and the readers- but we need independent witnesses to join us to ensure we are actually involved,” continues Ms. McGinley-Crowe. “Anyone interested in joining us for this exciting event can contact me directly at (978) 688-3599.”
